

The Superstition Mountain/Lost Dutchman Museum

The Superstition Mountain/Lost Dutchman Museum offers a variety of experiences for young and old alike. From a trip through the museum and the early history of the area to a walk on the nature trail, to a stroll through the Apacheland buildings, there is always something to see and a special peace to be felt as you look up at the majestic Superstition Mountain. Add an array of events, classes and activities and you'll see that the Museum offers a wealth of support to enrich our community.

Thousands of people from around the world visit the museum grounds yearly. As a gateway to the Apache Trail, in Arizona, we offer visitors a wonderful experience.

As a non-profit institution, the museum relies on the the generosity of folks like you to provide ongoing support for the educational programming, exhibits and events that help preserve, research and present the history or our area. We receive no assistance from any government agency: city, county, state or federal.

Our property is staffed by a group of the most dedicated and friendly volunteers around. Many of whom are available to conduct tours of both the inside and outside exhibits.
